I started on the frontend, took on the backend, and now ship LLM features in production. Ten years in, the stack has changed more than once; what carries over is understanding how the whole system fits together. Most of what I ship is infrastructure other teams build on: low-code platforms, back-office systems, document management, e-commerce. I own architecture and performance on large codebases, and run the code review that keeps them maintainable. React, Next.js and TypeScript on the front, Node.js and PostgreSQL behind it.

WHAT I'VE OWNED

- Designed a DSL for a low-code reporting platform, so analysts write formulas themselves instead of filing tickets.
- Worked directly with clients in the EU and the US: from deciding what to build, through the trade-offs, to what shipped.
- Owned the frontend architecture of that platform: a widget system configured at runtime.
- Built premium subscriptions for a PWA that also runs in native apps: a paywall plus store purchases and restores.
- Took LLM features from prototype to production inside real product flows.
- Kept large tables and charts responsive on codebases too large for one engineer to keep in their head.
- Set up the code review process and mentored the developers who joined later.
